- Job searching through job database

Success Story:

I visited the career services center several times, for advice on career options and putting myself in line with them, but my most notable success when I was getting close to graduating and had 0 prospects with 3 months left to go. I decided to look on Lobo Career Connection (the job database used at the time), where I found a full-time role for a entry-level Technical Recruiter. I was doing student recruitment at the time, so I figured it was worth the leap of faith and asked if they had any internships available. I interviewed with Aerotek, and landed a recruiter intern position which translated to a full-time role upon graduation. It was a great experience and gave me a lot of exposure to recruitment, which after a year ended up translating to an opportunity to recruit for University Graduate Software Engineers at Google in Mountain View, CA who appreciated my blend of technical recruiting and student recruitment from UNM! I feel grateful for this opportunity and truly believe UNM Career Services set me in the right path to where I am today!
