MAJORS

Critical cultural studies majors immerse students in interdisciplinary investigations of histories, communities, and human perspectives. These fields examine cultural phenomena such as political structures, social movements, and media with an emphasis on power, social organization, and the experiences of historically marginalized people. Several UNM departments offer majors that fall under this umbrella, each using a distinctive lens and operating within a rich scholarly tradition. Because students in these majors often have similar career interests, we have grouped them together for the purposes of this guide. Cultural studies majors offered at UNM include:

- Africana Studies
- American Studies
- Chicana and Chicano Studies
- Native American Studies
- Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies

Students in these majors gain outstanding writing and critical thinking skills and an in-depth knowledge of their chosen focus areas. These disciplines are politically engaged, challenging students to grapple with issues of justice and equity. Graduates have the opportunity to make huge impacts in New Mexico, using their rigorous understanding of cultures, histories and systems of power to create sustainable, community-based solutions to our most pressing challenges. Graduates often pursue careers in the fields of law, policy, education, social services, and community organizing.

Tips

- What issues from your classes are you most passionate about? Seek out community organizations working in those areas. Hands-on experience through jobs, internships and volunteer work will help you find focus in your field, plus building the skills and relationships that will allow a smooth transition to a job, graduate program or both.
- Ask your academic adviser, faculty adviser and professors about classes that include an internship or service learning component. For example, Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies offers a class called Feminism in Action in which students complete an internship in the community.
- Did you know that by serving in any AmeriCorps program, you can earn an education award to help pay for graduate school?
- Interested in working for the federal government? Special programs for students and recent grads are a great way to get started.
- Get an up-close up look at the field by conducting an informational interview with a professional who works in the field.
